Subject, Theme and Agent in Modern Standard Arabic

In certain theories of linguistics, thematic relations, also known as semantic roles, are the various roles that a noun phrase may play with respect to the action or state described by a governing verb, commonly the sentence's main verb. For example, in the sentence "Susan ate an apple", Susan is the doer of the eating, so she is an agent; the apple is the item that is eaten, so it is a patient. While most modern linguistic theories make reference to such relations in one form or another, the go agent; cause; instrument; experiencer; recipient; location; path; goal; measure; theme. Agents are arguments that bring about a state of affairs. The line between agents, on the one hand, and causes or instruments, on the other, can be fuzzy, but agents are (or are perceived to be) conscious or sentient, in a way that causes or instruments aren't. Some examples are given in (1)–(3).

The subject is the union of two semantic entities: the agent and the intransitive argument. For example, in the intransitive sentence " He ran, " He is the intransitive argument and thus uses the subject pronoun form. He also appears in the sentence " He chased him. " In this case, it is the agent.

What is the difference between a subject and an agent in ...

In linguistics, a grammatical agent is the thematic relation of the cause or initiator to an event. The agent is a semantic concept distinct from the subject of a sentence as well as from the topic. Whereas the subject is determined syntactically, primarily through word order, the agent is determined through its relationship to the action expressed by the verb.

Subject, Theme and Agent in Modern Standard Arabic

The obvious question that needs to be asked is whether the experiencer subject occupies a similar position to an agent subject or a different one. The choices would seem to be to place the experiencer in the specifier of an abstract light verb, or to place it in the specifier of the thematic verb:

5.2.4.3 Agent and experiencer subjects

In linguistics, a grammatical patient, also called the target or undergoer, is the participant of a situation upon whom an action is carried out or the thematic relation such a participant has with an action. Sometimes, "theme" and "patient" are used to mean the same thing. When used to mean different things, "patient" describes a receiver that changes state ("I crushed the car") and "theme ...
